

Special Issue

Investment and Sustainable Finance

Message from the Guest Editors

We welcome both theoretical and empirical studies, as well as interdisciplinary contributions, that provide new insights into sustainable finance and investment. Potential topics include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Innovations in green financial instruments and markets (e.g., green bonds, ESG funds).
- The impact of sustainable finance on corporate performance and stakeholder value.
- Policy frameworks and regulations supporting sustainable investments.
- The role of financial institutions in climate change mitigation and adaptation.
- Measurement and integration of ESG (Environmental, Social, Governance) criteria in investment decision-making.
- Challenges in transitioning to sustainable financial systems in emerging economies.

The deadline for submissions is [30th April 2025]. Accepted papers will undergo a rigorous peer-review process and contribute to the academic and practical discourse on sustainable finance. For inquiries, please contact [y.guo@tees.ac.uk]. For submission guidelines and further details, please contact [ijfs@mdpi.com].

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I'm thrilled to take the leadership reins of the International Journal of Financial Studies and welcome the opportunity to make it one of the vanguard open-source scientific journals in our field. I eagerly look forward to working with the journal editorial team in building upon the quality instilled by my predecessor to develop the title further and broaden the appeal to other new finance research areas while keeping our core a high-quality finance journal that serves and highly values the scientific community, readers and authors alike. IJFS aims to publish high-quality manuscripts in both theoretical and empirical finance spanning all the major research areas in the field. It aims to provide an outlet for original finance scholarly research that promotes interaction among finance scholars and practitioners and bridges the divide that can exist between them.
