Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Dynamic, interactive web maps that tell stories have become pervasive in all aspects of the mobile information society. What are the design guidelines and best practices of online geovisual storytelling? How efficiently and effectively do uncovered data stories communicate statistical relationships to a broad and diverse set of non-expert users?

We invite you to contribute to this Special Issue of the ISPRS International Journal of Geo-Information to explore the frontier in geographic data driven story telling on the Web 2.0. We encourage submissions from all relevant disciplines and from a diverse set of scientific practices aimed to further advance this transdisciplinary research field. We are especially looking for empirical contributions that evaluate new forms of online communication of geographic information for a broad range of issues, users, and respective user engagements.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The ISPRS International Journal of Geo-Information invites you to submit research articles, reviews, and reports covering topics of the whole domain of geo-information. Although the journal was only founded in 2012, it has already achieved wide recognition in the scientific community. We are proud that since April 2015, our journal is indexed by the SCIE of the Web of Science. As Editor-in-Chief, I encourage you to consider IJGI for your scientific papers and would be pleased to welcome you as authors.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), GeoRef, PubAg, dblp, Astrophysics Data System, Inspec, and other databases.

Journal Rank: JCR - Q2 (Remote Sensing) / CiteScore - Q1 (Geography, Planning and Development)
