Geospatial Semantics Applications

Message from the Guest Editor

The rapid evolution of the Web of Data provides new opportunities for research and development in the fields of Geosciences and Geography. Space and time are fundamental characteristics of data associated with these fields and play an important role in corresponding semantic / linked data organization, manipulation, and interpretation. For this Special Issue, we invite submissions of original technical papers describing real systems or working prototypes that incorporate semantics in geospatial or spatiotemporal information management. Such applications may include spatial data infrastructures, spatiotemporal databases / geographic information retrieval systems, sensor networks, geo-visualization tools, location-based services, remote sensing classification tools, spatial decision support systems, web services and more.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The ISPRS International Journal of Geo-Information invites you to submit research articles, reviews, and reports covering topics of the whole domain of geo-information. Although the journal was only founded in 2012, it has already achieved wide recognition in the scientific community. We are proud that since April 2015, our journal is indexed by the SCIE of the Web of Science. As Editor-in-Chief, I encourage you to consider IJGI for your scientific papers and would be pleased to welcome you as authors.
