Message from the Guest Editor

Dear colleagues,

This Special Issue will focus on new treatment strategies to prevent conditions involving poor bone health, such as osteoporosis and growth retardation as a result of either drug(s) or diseases like cancer, inflammation, diabetes and neuromuscular disorders. The use of new concepts (invasive or non-invasive) or signaling cascades to positively regulate bone health will advance the field towards new treatment strategies with potential application in the clinic.

The sub-topics of this Special Issue are

- Bone growth and osteoporosis
- Bone health in cancer
- Inflammation and bone
- Diabetes/kidney and bone
- Bone health in neuromuscular disorders
- Glucocorticoids, bisphosphonates, biologics, molecules and bone
- Mechanical stress and bone
- New technologies in bone health
