The aim of this Special Issue is to attract high-quality studies describing computational and experimental approaches for investigating the molecular effects of novel genetic mutations, and providing a useful framework for understanding the molecular defects underlying human diseases. Contributors are also encouraged to submit articles describing use cases, models, and methodological innovations.

The Special Issue will include (1) human genetics studies on genome/exome or targeted sequencing panels that allow either identification of disease–gene associations, characterization of rare diseases with significant genetic heterogeneity, or differential clustering of disease mutations associated with distinct phenotypes; (2) experimental studies investigating how a genetic variant causes disease at the molecular, cellular, and organismal levels; and (3) computational methods devised to predict the impact of genetic variations and their assessment, large-scale statistical studies dissecting key features of disease mutations, or well-curated data repositories of genetic variation and/or disease associations.

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
