Message from the Guest Editor

Nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy continues to be a powerful technology for the characterization of materials at the molecular level. The ability to probe nucleus-specific questions, combined with recent improvements in sensitivity, resolution, spin coherence manipulation, quantum chemical calculations, and multivariate/chemometric analysis, render NMR a rich field.

The focus of this Special Issue is to explore these recent NMR advances for the characterization of real-life materials being used in sensing, energy, quantum computing, advanced manufacturing, biomedical, and environmental remediation applications, including self-assembled materials, super-molecular and stimuli-responsive polymers, polymer membranes, composites, MOFs, liquid crystalline polymers, ceramics, glasses, biomaterials, catalyst, and surface-modified nanoparticles. This Issue will offer an overview of some of the exciting opportunities NMR can provide in material characterization.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, MEDLINE, Embase, CAPlus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank: JCR - Q1 (Biochemistry & Molecular Biology) / CiteScore - Q1 (Inorganic Chemistry)
