Head and Neck Tumors: New Diagnostic, Prognostic and Therapeutic Opportunities

Message from the Guest Editor

Leading by and assisting by our Topical Advisory Panel Member Dr. Francesca Spirito (University of Foggia), this Special Issue aims to expand the current molecular knowledge around head and neck tumors useful for the diagnosis, prognosis, and therapy of these tumors.

Suitable topics include HNC genomics, epigenomics, transcriptomics, proteomics, and metabolomics, as well as diagnosis, epidemiology, pathology, immunology, therapy, and monitoring. We encourage experts to discuss their experiences and results involving experimental studies using in vitro and in vivo models, including patient-derived xenograft animal models, biomarker analyses of patient saliva or other body fluids, and tumor-derived microRNA or extracellular vesicles, as well as review articles, noting the Special Issue focus on molecular research, which means that pure clinical research will not be accepted.
