Molecular Research in Aggressive Behavior

Message from the Guest Editor

We invite submissions for inclusion in our Special Issue of the International Journal of Molecular Sciences on the topic of "Molecular Research in Aggressive Behavior."

This Special Issue brings together cutting-edge research from molecular fields to enhance our understanding of aggressive behavior. Aggression is a complex behavioural syndrome that significantly impacts individuals suffering from mental disorders. It exacerbates the severity of the condition, complicates treatment approaches, and diminishes their quality of life. Elucidating molecular mechanisms underlying aggression and translating these findings into clinical practice is vital for developing effective interventions and improving patient outcomes. We encourage the submission of original research articles, reviews, and short communications that address various aspects of the molecular basis of aggression. Clinical or pure model submissions with biomolecular experiments are welcome. Non-exhaustive topics include:

- Aggressive behaviour and its neuropsychiatric complications
- Molecular mechanisms involved in aggression
- Novel therapeutic approaches targeting aggression in mental disorders

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
