Recent Research in Supramolecular Chemistry

Message from the Guest Editors

In recent years, supramolecular chemistry has been gaining momentum. Supramolecular chemistry is driven by non-covalent interactions. To understand these interactions is vital, since they are inevitable in the description of biological processes and various polymeric systems. The physical and chemical properties of supramolecular systems can be explored using computational and experimental tools which are undeniably complementary to each other. This Special Issue, entitled “Recent Research in Supramolecular Chemistry”, will cover experimental and theoretical results in the field, including the latest developments and applications. Both research and review papers are welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
