Natural Products: New Insights into Overcoming Oxidative Stress in Pathological Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

The concept of oxidative stress as "a disturbance in the pro-oxidant-antioxidant balance in favor of the former" was introduced about 40 years ago, and, in the last ten years alone, about 200,000 articles studying the link between oxidative stress and the acute/chronic phase of several diseases (from metabolic and chronic disorders to cancers) have been published at PubMed.

This Special Issue of International Journal of Molecular Sciences on "Natural Products: New Insights into Overcoming Oxidative Stress in Pathological Diseases", supervised by Dr. Maria Grazia Bottone (University of Pavia, Italy) and supported by Dr. Fabrizio De Luca (University of Pavia, Italy). In this Special Issue, we invite you to contribute original research articles reporting data from both experimental and clinical studies, as well as review articles, that allow a better understanding of the effects of nutraceuticals, dietary supplements, and functional foods on different diseases showing the direct involvement of the oxidative stress pathway.

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
