DNA Damage, Oxidative Stress and Related Metabolic By-Products in Cancer and Environmental Studies 2.0

Message from the Guest Editor

Molecular epidemiology can play a major role in elucidating the multi-step transformation of normal cells to a malignant state, potentially leading to the definition of predictive biomarkers of cancer risk and carcinogen exposure. In this Special Issue, I invite you to submit reviews and original articles that focus on the link between DNA damage, oxidative stress, and related metabolic by-products in cancer and environmental studies. You are welcome to read papers in the first volume.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
