Extracellular Vesicles in Endocrine and Endocrine-Dependent Cancer

Message from the Guest Editors

Extracellular vesicles (EVs) are small membranous particles which contain bioactive molecules, such as proteins and nucleic acids, and play a key role in cellular communication both under physiological and pathological conditions. Given the increasing interest regarding EVs in the area of cancer biology and translational research, this Special Issue aims to establish a comprehensive collection of broad knowledge regarding the involvement of EVs in the field of endocrine and endocrine-related cancer, ranging from the experimental analysis of cellular/molecular processes—using in vitro and in vivo models—to clinical application, and from basic research to clinical practice. Articles addressing potential strategies to effectively utilize EVs for endocrine cancer diagnosis, prognosis, and therapy are all welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
