Nanoformulations and Nano Drug Delivery

Message from the Guest Editor

Over the last few decades, the body of research on nanotechnology has tremendously grown, especially in the areas of drug delivery, bio-imaging, therapy, and diagnostics. In addition, novel molecular self-assembled structures have been widely applied for various therapeutic drug delivery purposes. In this Special Issue, we would like to showcase functional nanomaterials of organic, inorganic, or hybrid origin with specific applications to further enhance their scope in theranosis. I welcome you to take this special opportunity to show the world what you have been doing in terms of excellent science and technology.

Keywords

nanoformulations
inorganic nanoparticles organic nanoparticles hybrid nanomaterials
self-assembled nanoparticles cancer therapy
tissue engineering
diagnostics
therapy

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.

Author Benefits

Open Access:

free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility:

indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, MEDLINE, Embase, CAPlus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank:

JCR - Q1 (Biochemistry and Molecular Biology) / CiteScore
- Q1 (Organic Chemistry)
