Recent Nanotechnology in Drug Delivery

Message from the Guest Editor

Drug delivery nanotechnology has achieved high levels in clinical trials and practical applications in human and veterinary medicine. Currently, research on nano delivery systems focuses on improved and functional nanoparticles and nanomaterials designed to provide effective drug and bioactive targeting, enable gene therapies, and optimize complex treatments. This Special Issue aims to provide a current and recent overview of basic research, developmental studies, and applications of drug delivery systems in all fields related to human and veterinary medicine. Special focus will be given to nanotechnological approaches. In addition, clinical or pure model submissions with biomolecular experiments are welcomed. Experimental, theoretical, and review articles are welcome. This Special Issue is supervised by , with assistance from Prof. Dr. Patrick D. Mathews (Sao Paulo State University).

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, and molecular biophysics. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.

Author Benefits

Open Access:

free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility:

indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, MEDLINE, Embase, CAPus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank:

JCR - Q1 (Biochemistry and Molecular Biology) / CiteScore - Q1 (Organic Chemistry)
