Cell and Molecular Biology of Pancreatic Disorders 2019

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue is a continuation of our 2018 Special Issue, “Cell and Molecular Biology of Pancreatic Disorders”. This Special Issue is expected to cover the molecular and cellular mechanisms associated with pancreatic ductal adenocarcinomas, as well as the contribution of pancreatitis to the genesis of this disease. Other relevant aspects like the contribution of microenvironmental factors, cancer stem cells, behavior correlates such as smoking, and the role of environmental pollutants in the genesis and progression as well as responses to therapy will be covered in this Issue. We expect that this Special Issue will provide the latest information on the underlying mechanisms and treatment strategies associated with pancreatic disorders, and will be of interest to scientists and clinicians working in this area.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
