

Special Issue

Antiviral Drugs and Virus Infection

Message from the Guest Editors

Over the years, IJMS has been publishing high-quality research articles on molecular studies in biology and chemistry, with a strong emphasis on molecular biology and molecular medicine. This Special Issue will be devoted to the mechanism of virus infection, including the participation of host factors in infection and in the defense against virus infection. It is well established that new and potential antivirals are needed for the treatment of all viral infections. This Special Issue of IJMS will also cover research on the mechanisms of drug susceptibility and resistance. Research articles on all viruses (including plant viruses) are welcome for submission.
