Advances in G Protein-Coupled Receptors

Message from the Guest Editor

The humble G protein-coupled receptor is responsible for a considerable proportion of the world's pharmacopeia since its initial discovery. Each year since its landmark discovery, GPCRs have demonstrated their near-endless versatility with respect to the control of human physiology. To pay homage to this tremendously diverse capacity we intend to form, this Special Issue of IJMS stands as a collection of some of the most intriguing and innovative research articles that demonstrate the latest nuances of the GPCR signaling and therapeutic repertoire. To this end, I welcome the submission of both basic and applied science articles relevant to the most up-to-date aspects of GPCR functionality.

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
