Neuro-Centric Applications of Zebrafish: Models and Risk Factors

Message from the Guest Editor

This special issue aims to cover the most up-to-date zebrafish models to study neurodevelopmental disorders (e.g., autism spectrum disorder, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder) as well as neurodegenerative diseases (e.g., Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, multiple sclerosis, peripheral neuropathy). In addition, this issue will also cover the contribution of non-neural and environmental risk factors, such as microbiome, infection, metabolism, and chemicals/nanomaterials, to neuro-related physiology and pathological conditions using zebrafish. keywords:

- zebrafish
- neuro-centric
- neurodevelopmental
- neurophysiological
- neuropathological
- neurodegenerative diseases

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The International Journal of Molecular Sciences (IJMS, ISSN 1422-0067) is an open access journal, which was established in 2000. The journal aims to provide a forum for scholarly research on a range of topics, including biochemistry, molecular and cell biology, molecular biophysics, molecular medicine, and all aspects of molecular research in chemistry. IJMS publishes both original research and review articles, and regularly publishes special issues to highlight advances at the cutting edge of research. We invite you to read recent articles published in IJMS and consider publishing your next paper with us.
