Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue welcomes field work and reviews of research studies focused on suicide, particularly the triggers for suicidal ideation, to understand the risk factors, contribute to the control of suicide attempts, and improve mental and emotional health. Due to its multidisciplinary nature, research on health promotion, educational guidelines for prevention, management of behavioral factors or unhealthy lifestyles, social, cultural, and philosophical approaches to suicidal behavior, risk factors, intervention, and treatment, and all work that helps to clarify suicidal behavior and suicidal ideation may also be presented. This will improve our understanding of this behavior and help to prevent it in the future.

Potential topics for this Special Issue include (but are not limited to):

- Suicidal ideation;
- Suicide attempt;
- Assisted suicide;
- Autolysis;
- Public health;
- Prevention;
- Disease prevention;
- Euthanasia;
- Healthy lifestyles;
- Health promotion.
