Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

In recent years, there has been a dynamic development of dental care due to the introduction of novel dental implants. The digital revolution, which also found its way into dentistry, has resulted in improved clinical workflows and approaches for new treatments, such as bone regeneration.

All such innovations in the field of oral health are aimed to improve patient-centered dental care and promote their overall wellbeing.

The aim of this Special Issue is to disseminate knowledge on the recent and innovative clinical means/approaches being developed to improve dental treatments.
