Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue to explore the advancements and challenges in personalized and precision medicine approaches for the management of head and neck cancer. This Special Issue invites original research articles that delve into various aspects of targeted treatment for head–neck cancer. We encourage submissions focusing on novel targeted therapies, immunotherapy and other precision medicine approaches that address the unique characteristics of head and neck tumors.

We seek comprehensive research articles, clinical studies, experimental investigations and translational studies that shed light on the latest developments in targeted treatment within the field of head–neck cancer. However, please note that this Special Issue will not consider mini-reviews or case reports.

We look forward to receiving your submissions and contributing to the collective understanding of targeted treatment potential in improving outcomes for patients with head and neck cancer.
