Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

“Structural heart disease” is any non-coronary cardiovascular abnormality, congenital or developed with aging, which weakens the heart’s structure. In the last few decades, many significant advances have been achieved in our understanding of the pathological mechanisms which underlie such conditions, and new diagnostic tools and treatment options have been developed.

The scope of this Special Issue is to provide an overview of the latest advances in structural heart diseases’ diagnosis and treatment. Therefore, researchers in the field of structural heart disease are encouraged to submit an original article or review to this Special Issue (case reports and short reviews are not accepted).
