Antithrombotic Therapy in Special and Overlooked Populations with Cardiovascular Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

Guidelines often underrepresent real-life patients: the elderly, those with polypharmacy, cancer, chronic inflammation, or end-stage renal disease. This Special Issue aims at providing updated insights into the management of antithrombotic therapy in “difficult-to-treat” populations. Topics include adaptations in frail patients, cardio-oncology interfaces, antithrombotics in dialysis and transplant candidates, and management in rare or overlapping syndromes. Clinical studies, expert perspectives, and practical approaches are all welcome. You may choose our Joint Special Issue in JCDD.
