Advances in Vascular Aging

Message from the Guest Editors

this Special Issue will highlight emerging technologies and methodologies that contribute to a more nuanced understanding of vascular aging. Advanced imaging techniques, omics approaches, and experimental models provided by researchers are suggested to unravel the intricacies of vascular aging, paving the way for innovative diagnostic and therapeutic strategies. Contributions from experts in the field will offer a holistic view of vascular aging, encompassing its impact on various organs and systems. The interdisciplinary nature of the research presented is meant to emphasize the interconnectedness between vascular aging and other age-related conditions and to offer a comprehensive outlook for clinicians, researchers, and healthcare professionals. In conclusion, this Special Issue welcomes the basics with the aim of deepening our understanding of vascular aging and its implications. Contributions exploring the pathophysiological aspects and proposing innovative and ambitious therapeutic strategies are particularly encouraged.
