Gynecological Cancers— Surgical Management, Prognosis, and Quality of Life

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to invite you to submit a paper for this Special issue. Works focusing on the treatment of endometrial, cervical, ovarian, vulvar, and vaginal cancers and also on survivorship after them are welcome. The Special Issue will focus on the new findings in this area of expertise and will cover all the aspects of the path that women have to face. As regards treatment, we will accept original articles or review on surgical treatment, radiotherapy, and systemic treatment for primary or recurrent disease. Thanks to the progress in treatment for many gynecological cancers in the last few years, quality of life of patients has become an important issue for clinicians. In particular, papers focusing on the side effects of treatment, such as lymphedema, or on menopausal symptoms treatment in this subset of patients or on the important topic of fertility preservation for gynecological oncological patients are also invited. Furthermore, we strongly believe that a 360° consideration of patient may lead to an improvement in the adherence to therapy and that the future of gynecological oncology might also look in this direction.
