Clinical Perspectives in Trauma and Orthopedic Surgery

Message from the Guest Editor

Trauma and orthopedic surgery techniques are rapidly evolving. This Special Issue provides a comprehensive overview of the latest research advancements in the field of trauma and orthopedic surgery techniques, especially regarding the knee, ankle, and hip. It focuses on cutting-edge techniques, innovative treatment approaches, and emerging trends in managing traumatic injuries and orthopedic conditions. The Special Issue includes contributions from leading experts who share their insights on surgical strategies, rehabilitation protocols, and the integration of new technologies (such as biologics and minimally invasive procedures). This collection of preclinical and clinical articles aims to enhance clinical practices, improve patient outcomes, and foster a deeper understanding of the complexities involved in trauma and orthopedic surgery. In this Special Issue, we welcome authors to submit papers on clinical advances in terms of both diagnosis and treatment.
