Vitreoretinal Diseases: Latest Advance in Diagnosis and Management

Message from the Guest Editors

The Special Issue of JCM on “Vitreoretinal Diseases: Latest Advance in Diagnosis and Management” provides a unique opportunity for experts in the field to share their knowledge and research with a wider audience.

This Special Issue aims to highlight the latest advancements in the treatment of retinal conditions, such as retinal detachment, including innovative surgical procedures and advancements in retina reattachment. We will also delve into the latest research on proliferative vitreoretinopathy (PVR), a complication that can occur after retinal detachment surgery, and discuss the potential consequences and treatment options for this condition. Additionally, we will discuss the various disorders that can affect the macula. From macular holes to macular hemorrhage, we will examine the latest treatments and therapies that are available to help patients maintain their vision and quality of life. We encourage you to share your expertise and research in this field by submitting your work to this Special Issue.
