Clinical Management and Outcomes in Wound Healing

Message from the Guest Editor

Although initially focused on burn patients, in recent years, wound healing has become an increasingly pressing challenge due to the increase in cases of so-called ulcerative pathologies, which we could define as a silent epidemic. Nowadays, in order to achieve the best possible wound healing, we have to overcome many challenges by incorporating new technologies, advanced dressings, surgical therapies, dermal matrices, and regenerative medicine. In this Special Issue, we aim to present innovative studies in the field of wound healing, in order to create a new strategy for the treatment of acute and chronic wounds both in adults and in children.
