Current Updates on the Inner Ear

Message from the Guest Editors

The "Current Updates on the Inner ear" Special Issue aims to gather high-quality research articles, reviews, and case studies that delve into the various facets of hearing loss and its associated aspects. We encourage submissions that explore novel diagnostic techniques, therapeutic interventions, advancements in auditory prosthetics, neurophysiological studies of the cochlea, genetic predisposition to hearing disorders, and emerging treatment modalities for vertigo and imbalance. This Special Issue aims to bridge the gap between fundamental research and clinical applications, shedding light on the latest breakthroughs and innovations in the field. This issue aims to provide a comprehensive platform for exchanging cutting-edge research and insights in the fields of inner ear, cochlea, hearing loss, hearing disorders, otology, audiology, deafness, ENT, and vertigo. It seeks to foster collaboration among researchers, clinicians, and experts to advance our understanding of the intricate mechanisms underlying hearing loss and related conditions.
