

Special Issue

Clinical, Translational and Experimental Pharmacotherapeutics Advances

Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue focuses on current research trends in clinical, translational and experimental pharmacotherapeutics. It serves as an international forum for sharing and exchange of research outcomes among health practitioners, scientists and researchers associated with experimental, translational and clinical pharmacotherapeutics. Clinical pharmacotherapeutics refers to the rational use of drugs to diagnose, prevent and treat diseases in clinical practice. Moreover, translational pharmacotherapeutics is a novel concept, which devotes to translating novel theranostics from bench to bedside. Translational pharmacotherapeutics includes but not limited to new theories, new therapies, and new technologies for potential clinical application. Experimental pharmacotherapeutics refers to the experimental & basic research for purpose of pharmacotherapeutics. Experimental pharmacotherapeutics includes but not limited to target identification & validation, compound designing and screening, activity evaluation, mechanism of action, drug delivery, pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, chronotoxicology, preclinical safety & toxicity, etc.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
