Review Special Issue Series: New Advances in Cardiovascular Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

In recent years there have been numerous advances in cardiology that have changed the way of conceiving the disease and the cardiopathic patient. Among these we cannot fail to include the advent of trans-catheter aortic valve implantation (TAVI) and, in general, structural heart interventions; the improvement of imaging techniques with the preponderant advancement of cardiac magnetic resonance (CMR) and computerized tomography (CT) in the non-invasive diagnosis of ischemic heart disease or cardiomyopathies, passing through new pacing techniques and ablative approaches; the use of artificial intelligence in the diagnosis of cardiovascular disease and new therapeutic approaches for heart failure. For this reason, the Journal of Clinical Medicine is pleased to announce a Special Issue entitled "Review Special Issue Series: New Advances in Cardiovascular Medicine". Narrative or systematic literature reviews will be accepted. The aim of this Special Issue is to provide complete updates relating to the new frontiers of cardiology.
