Endoscopic Innovations in Gastrointestinal Diseases: From Diagnosis to Therapy

Message from the Guest Editors

Endoscopy has revolutionized the field of gastroenterology, transforming both the diagnosis and treatment of gastrointestinal diseases. Continuous technological progress—from high-definition imaging and artificial intelligence–assisted endoscopy to advanced therapeutic tools—is reshaping clinical practice and patient outcomes. Novel diagnostic approaches, including virtual chromoendoscopy and confocal laser endomicroscopy, allow real-time histologic assessment and earlier detection of neoplastic and inflammatory lesions. Moreover, the integration of digital platforms, robotics, and AI-driven analytics is paving the way toward personalized endoscopic strategies, with improved precision and safety.

The objective of this Special Issue, “Endoscopic Innovations in Gastrointestinal Diseases: From Diagnosis to Therapy,” is to provide an updated overview of the latest technological and clinical advances in diagnostic and therapeutic endoscopy, highlighting how innovation continues to expand the horizons of patient care across the gastrointestinal tract.
