Rheumatoid Arthritis: Current Status and Future Challenges

Message from the Guest Editor

In the last 25 years, we have witnessed changes in the approach to Rheumatoid Arthritis. The main changes have occurred in the knowledge of the pathogenesis, new classification criteria, improved autoantibodies of diagnostic, implementation of the treat-to-target strategy, more and better drugs..... This Special Issue aims to update the clinician about these milestones with some original articles and reviews, and also discuss different hot topics. It is a pleasure for me, on behalf of the editorial committee of the Journal of Clinical Medicine, to invite you to contribute with state-of-the-art reviews as well as original research. All of them will be considered for inclusion. The scope will be advances in old and new drugs, old and new treatment strategies, treatment of pain and depression, management of RA-related comorbidities, how to include the patient perspective in the daily practice, unmet needs, the remission concept, management of comorbidities, how to improve outcomes in the daily practice, etc. I hope you are interested in submitting your work in this Special Issue. I look forward to hearing from you.
