Acute and Chronic Heart Failure: Clinical Updates and Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editors

In recent decades, several advancements have been made regarding Heart failure (HF) treatment. Pharmacological therapy, alongside well-established therapies, has seen the introduction of new molecules. These molecules have now largely entered clinical practice and are recognized in international guidelines, such as valsartan/sacubitril, SGLT2 inhibitors and even more recent drugs such as vericiguat. Furthermore, device-based therapy has seen a significant improvement, with the development of more efficient systems of cardiac pacing and resynchronization. The aim of this Special Issue is to provide insights regarding the latest advancements in all aspect of heart failure treatment, both in the acute and chronic settings. In particular, original research and valuable reviews concerning the newest progress regarding HF will be welcomed. Keywords: acute heart failure chronic heart failure devices drugs therapy
percutaneous ventricular assist devices

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
