

Special Issue

Clinical Epidemiology in Chronic Kidney Disease

Message from the Guest Editors

Chronic kidney disease (CKD) is one of the major health problems worldwide, with an estimated prevalence of stages 1–4 of 16% in Europe and 13% in the US. Patients with end-stage kidney disease (ESKD) have an incredibly high risk of death and cardiovascular disease that is difficult to predict with Framingham risk factors. This Special Issue aims to collect original articles focused on the epidemiology of comorbidities, cardiovascular events, mineral bone disorders and other complications that can occur in chronic kidney disease patients. Potential topics include but are not limited to the following:

- Epidemiology of the onset and progression of CKD and/or ESRD;
- Epidemiology of cardiovascular complications in CKD and/or ESRD;
- Epidemiology of mineral bone disease in CKD and/or ESRD;
- Mechanisms shared between kidneys and other organs and/or diseases;
- New therapeutic strategies;
- Novel approaches in the epidemiology of comorbidities in CKD patients thanks to the use of Artificial Intelligence.
