Colorectal Cancer: Clinical Therapeutic and Management Strategies

Message from the Guest Editor

Colorectal cancer is a major global health challenge, with significant variations in outcomes across different regions. This Special Issue aims to explore the role of health informatics and technology in the treatment and management of colorectal cancer, with a focus on context-specific applications for both low- and middle-income countries (LMICs) and high-income countries (HICs). We welcome original research articles, reviews, meta-analyses, and systematic reviews on the following themes:

- Development and implementation of treatment guidelines suitable for different healthcare settings;
- Application of artificial intelligence, machine learning, and deep learning in diagnosis, treatment planning, and predictive analytics for colorectal cancer;
- Utilization of mobile health applications and telehealth platforms to improve access to care and patient outcomes;
- Development and deployment of point-of-care diagnostic tools to facilitate early detection and treatment in diverse settings;
- Integration of biomedical data to enhance decision-making and personalized treatment strategies.
