Cardiovascular Disease and Diabetes: Management of Risk Factors

Message from the Guest Editors

Cardiovascular disease and diabetes are two interrelated and significant health concerns that pose substantial challenges globally. Moreover, cardiovascular disease remains the leading cause of mortality globally, and the prevalence of diabetes continues to rise at an alarming rate. The relationship between CVDs and diabetes is significant, with diabetes being a significant risk factor for the development and progression of CVDs. Therefore, it is imperative to prioritize early detection and prevention strategies to mitigate the impact of CVDs and diabetes. Given the complexity of this topic and its impact on clinical practice and public health, this Special Issue aims at providing a comprehensive overview of the risk factors associated with CVD and diabetes, as well as highlighting the latest advancements in their management. This Special Issue will feature a collection of original research articles, reviews, and clinical studies that delve into various aspects of risk factor management, encompassing lifestyle modifications, pharmacological interventions, and emerging therapeutic approaches.
