New Clinical Advances within the Gut–Skin Axis

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will include translational studies (cellular and animal-based studies), clinical studies (surveys, observational, or prospective studies), as well as epidemiological studies that focus on the role as well as the interplay between the skin and nutrition, oral supplements and nutraceuticals, and the microbiome (gut and skin). Topics can be broad and wide-ranging and may include sun protection, mitochondrial health, botanicals, foods, and diets, as well as studies that involve both the gut and skin microbiomes.
