Infectious Disease Epidemiology: Current Updates and Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editors

Infectious diseases are an extremely diverse field of medicine. Knowledge of the epidemiology of infectious diseases is the basis for strategic planning to reduce them in the context of public health. It is well known that the epidemiology of individual infectious diseases is changing, and the factors causing this are changes in human behaviour, anti-vaccination movements, international conflicts, climate change and others. Awareness and up-to-date knowledge in this area are crucial to achieving the goals of controlling and even ending the epidemic of individual infectious diseases. In this Special Issue, we invite authors to submit papers on the epidemiology of infectious diseases, in particular recent updates and perspectives.
