

Special Issue

New Therapies for Diabetic Foot Ulcer Management

Message from the Guest Editors

Diabetic foot disease is one of the major complications of diabetes mellitus, significantly impacting patients' quality of life and healthcare systems. Despite advancements in diagnosis and treatment, it remains a clinical challenge due to its high morbidity and risk of amputation. This Special Issue aims to compile current research and reviews on the latest developments in the prevention, diagnosis, and management of diabetic foot disease. Topics will include new therapeutic strategies, innovations in ulcer treatment, the use of biomarkers, emerging technologies in monitoring, and the microbiology of diabetic foot infections. Additionally, the issue will explore the role of telemedicine, artificial intelligence, and patient care in preventing complications. We invite researchers and clinicians to contribute original research articles and systematic reviews that expand knowledge on this condition and highlight the most promising therapeutic approaches.
