Neuromuscular Disorders and Complications: In the Challenge Lies a Solution

Message from the Guest Editor

Advances in technologies, rehabilitation strategies, outcome measures, and biomarker research have enabled the implementation of more efficient ways to implement multidisciplinary approaches to neuromuscular disorders. Furthermore, with new clinical trials and pharmacological treatments being approved, our community is experiencing both exciting times and new challenges. We are happy to invite you to submit a paper to the Journal of Clinical Medicine for the Special Issue entitled “Neuromuscular Disorders and Complications: In the Challenge Lies a Solution”. This Special Issue aims to showcase the current progress on neuromuscular care with a particular focus on new ways to approach and study old problems. Both research and review papers are welcome for possible publication in this Special Issue. I hope that your contributions will inspire our readers to explore this field further. We are looking forward to hearing from you soon. Kind regards,
