

Special Issue

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD): Diagnosis, Treatment, and Management

Message from the Guest Editor

We are organizing a Special Issue on adult ADHD, specifically focusing on the clinical pathway from pre-diagnosis, referral, and diagnostic and treatment approaches.

Adult ADHD is a rather new diagnostic category compared to other disorders, despite it being researched considerably. Areas of focus have been neuropsychology, biological markers, genetic markers, neuroanatomy, and neuroimaging

Regarding treatment approaches, several new pharmacological approaches have been studied, and different psychological and other types of methods are being developed to achieve a more holistic approach to therapeutics than medication.

This Special Issue is designed to collect articles focusing on new populations in which ADHD can be found, new approaches to diagnostics, and new treatment approaches. It welcomes input from different disciplines who feel they can contribute to this discussion.
