Head and Neck Surgery: Clinical Updates on Diagnosis, Management and Prognosis

Message from the Guest Editors

Head and neck tumors globally have a high impact on patients' survival and quality of life. The progress in medical devices and artificial intelligence are remarkable and have led to more attention being given to patients' reported outcome evaluations; now, both clinical and laboratory research should focus on improving patients' survival and quality of life. Moreover, many topics related to head and neck cancer diagnosis, treatment and management are still widely debated. Therapeutic indications have expanded steadily, and new therapies are being developed and implemented; the early results are promising, but need to be confirmed with more clinical trials and publications. In this Special Issue, we welcome authors to submit papers on clinical updates in terms of the diagnosis, management and prognosis of head and neck tumors. We welcome papers on new treatments, technology, AI and possible future perspectives.
