Current Clinical Research in Oral Maxillofacial Surgery

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, Current Clinical Research in Oral Maxillofacial Surgery, aims to present high-quality clinical and translational evidence addressing contemporary challenges in OMFS. We welcome original research, prospective and retrospective clinical studies, systematic reviews covering the full spectrum of maxillofacial and craniofacial surgery, including trauma, orthognathic surgery, congenital deformities, head and neck oncology, reconstructive and microsurgical procedures, and temporomandibular joint (TMJ) disorders. Particular emphasis is placed on modern diagnostic pathways, perioperative decision-making, complication analysis and prevention, functional and aesthetic outcomes, and patient-reported measures. We also encourage submissions on digital workflows (CBCT/CT, MRI, 3D planning, navigation), patient-specific implants and devices, and biomechanics that improve safety and predictability. Our goal is to provide an up-to-date, clinically practical collection of papers that supports evidence-based treatment and stimulates further collaboration across OMFS centres.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Journal of Clinical Medicine (ISSN 2077-0383) is an international, peer-reviewed, open access journal dedicated to advancing clinical and preclinical research. Our Editorial Board and staff are committed to delivering cutting-edge, timely, peer-reviewed articles spanning the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and impactful research articles, as well as reviews that are clinically significant and relevant to the full spectrum of medical disciplines. All full texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in SCIE (Web of Science), Scopus, PubMed, and other major databases. We invite you to submit your manuscript for publication, as well as join our community as a reviewer or reader online.
