Advances in Acute Myeloid Leukemia

Message from the Guest Editors

The prognosis of adult patients with acute myeloid leukemia (AML) remains poor. The 5-year overall survival rate of AML is approximately 25%, a statistic that has largely remained unchanged over the last decades. In recent years, we have witnessed the advent of several new treatments including targeted therapies, monoclonal antibodies and other immunotherapies. The rapid discovery of novel treatments along with advances in supportive care justify the expectation that the outcomes of AML patients can be finally improved in the near future. The focus of this Special Issue is to highlight these new advances in the treatment of AML.
