

Special Issue

Oral Biology: Advances of Translating Experimental Findings into Clinical Dentistry and Oral Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

The main aim of this Special Issue is to present new and innovative trends and methods used in every aspect of dentistry. Today, we are witnessing the accelerated development of materials and technology, including those applied in the treatment and general improvement of the treatment of dental disease.

Regenerative methods and biomaterials are finding increasing use in dental clinical practice. The aim of this Special Issue is to evaluate original research papers and reviews, encouraging manuscripts concerning the state of the art in the fields of new and innovative trends and methods used in every aspect of dentistry. This Special Issue also aims to make relevant work known to our colleagues in the field. To achieve this, the Special Issue invites scientists to submit research articles and reviews focused on this topic. We look forward to your valuable contributions of the use of new biomaterials and autologous teeth in the regeneration of severe bone atrophy for implant-prosthetic rehabilitation, new orthodontic techniques with skeletally anchored devices using miniscrews (TADS, MADS, MARPE), and new aligner methods.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
