Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease: Methodological Challenges for Precision Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to advance precision medicine for patients with COPD by identifying and solving methodological challenges in phenotyping, endotyping, and translating research to clinical care. We are happy to receive your submissions to move precision medicine forward. We would like to move this field forward and invite original research, meta-analysis, and state-of-the-art reviews on methodological challenges for precision medicine in COPD. Examples include pharmacoepidemiological studies, meta-analyses of clinical trials studying the effectiveness of pharmacological therapies for COPD, and novel data or concepts on integrating more personalized care for patients with COPD in clinical practice.

Keywords: precision medicine; pharmacoepidemiology; personalized care; therapy adherence; COPD asthma
