Computational Neuroradiology and AI in Neuroradiology

Message from the Guest Editor

With the progress of information science and computer science, e.g., machine learning and deep learning in applications of medical imaging, computational radiology and artificial intelligence (AI) and radiology are emerging as increasingly important branches in radiology. These technologies can provide quantitative and elaborate descriptions for radiological diagnosis and improve levels of detection, screening, classification, and prognosis of diseases. Thus, the aims of this Special Issue are to highlight the recent progress and trends in computational neuroradiology and AI-assisted neuroradiology and promote development of radiological diagnosis in major neurological diseases, such as cerebral vascular diseases, brain tumors, epilepsy and multiple sclerosis, etc.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
