

Special Issue

Pediatric Hearing Loss: Advances in Early Detection, Intervention and Family- Centered Care

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue focuses on recent advances in the early detection and management of pediatric hearing loss. Topics include innovations in newborn hearing screening, interdisciplinary developmental care, and genetic insights, including emerging gene-targeted therapies. Cutting-edge interventions, such as personalized hearing aids and cochlear implants, are discussed alongside outcome predictors that guide individualized care. Emphasizing multiprofessional and family-centered models, the issue highlights strategies that support children with congenital hearing loss—including those with additional disabilities—through parental engagement, continuity of care, and shared decision-making from genetic testing to intervention planning. Contributions on novel clinical approaches, interprofessional diagnostics, family-centered care, and gene-based therapies are especially welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
