Diagnosis, Emergency Management, and Prognosis of Hypertension and Cardiovascular Disease: Current Status and Future Directions

Message from the Guest Editor

Hypertension and the related CV diseases represent a major issue in the management of patients with CV disease. The current management of patients with arterial hypertension faces new challenges with the introduction of new technology and telemedicine approaches for the improved prediction of CV disease. Blood pressure control and measurement are also faced with the consequence of the rapid increase in new technologies and with the development of cuffless methods and telemonitoring. Our Special Issue will focus on the pathophysiology, clinical advances and current management of cardiovascular disease with a particular focus on hypertension and related CV disorders.
